Long Bio

Sean Madden is a multitalented writer with big dreams from Satellite Beach, Florida. He is constantly producing content for the enjoyment of others, whether it's written or visual media. He is always watching or researching many different types of media and pays close attention to the story and writing of everything he sees. He has a good idea of what works in writing versus what doesn't, and knows what people enjoy about these stories.

There's never a moment where an idea isn't circulating through Sean's head, be it a plot element he wants to use in his works, an idea for the creation of an original character, or even simply something that would just blow people away when they read it. Sean is always eager to take up a writing task and has written multiple forms of media. While he's up for writing anything, his favorite stories are adventures that are often inspired by plots of video games he has played in years past and present.

Sean enjoys more than just playing video games in his spare time. He writes part-time for area magazines Tortoise Island Living and The Thrifty Nickel, as well as managing social media pages for a local music school. He is trusted by neighbors to look after their homes and pets when they're away, and he also plays drums for the active music ministry for his church.

Sometimes he produces content that doesn't involve writing, such as pieces of hand-drawn artwork, covers of his favorite songs, and videos of himself and his friends playing video games and traveling together, having fun like normal geeks.
